EMERSON'S SINGING SCHOOL.—Mr. Emerson, the author of the above work, has above work, has a composer, and the book will undoubtedly be extensively used in singing classes.

It contains, in addition to the "elements," more than a hundred tunes, conveniently divided into exercise-tunes, glees, psalm-tunes and anthems, thus providing ample material for a number of "winter evenings" entertainments."

Very many congregations have dispensed with choirs, and do not need a full-size thurch Music book, and the smaller work will be just the thing for teachers and put.
